TURNING SECURITY OPERATIONS INTO BOARD-READY METRICS

March 17, 2026
3:00 PM-4:15 PM
Eastern Time

Security and compliance teams collect more information than ever—from control test results and audit evidence to cloud and operational signals. But when this information reaches the board, it often fails to answer the questions executives care about most: What risk do we carry today? Are controls working as intended? How are AI systems and AI-driven workflows impacting our risk posture? And what has changed since the last review?

For organizations navigating M&A, that last question carries the highest stakes — inherited control gaps and unknown compliance posture demand answers boards can trust, not point-in-time snapshots assembled under pressure.

This executive council brings together security leaders from AWS, Drata, and Emburse to discuss how leading organizations are building board-ready security and compliance metrics grounded in continuous assurance. The conversation will focus on moving beyond activity reporting to metrics that reflect control health, risk exposure, and verifiable assurance.

Attendees will learn how leading teams translate continuous control monitoring and centralized evidence into clear, defensible metrics that boards trust. We'll share practical approaches to simplifying board-level reporting, strengthening executive confidence, and enabling faster, better-informed decisions—without adding manual reporting overhead.
