Beyond the Video Experts: Scaling your Video Creation In-House to Drive Real Results

With 84% of consumers stating they've been influenced by a brand video in their buying decisions, there's no denying the power of video in marketing and comms. But getting started with (and scaling) video creation can be inefficient and costly, especially when outsourced. The solution? In-house video creation.

In this session, we'll discuss the many benefits of setting your team up for success in creating your videos in-house and how to get started.

Talking points include:

How to reduce video creation time with templates and automation tools

Increasing output quality with brand ownership & agility toward always-shifting trends

How to measure the impact and cost savings of in-house video creation

And much more.

Is Redefining/Relabeling Marketing Leadership in Modern Enterprises What We Really Need?

In recent years, leading companies have been eliminating the CMO or Head of Marketing position to better align marketing with overall business growth, customer experience, and commercial activities. This shift involves assigning marketing responsibilities to roles such as Chief Commercial Officer (CCO), Chief Growth Officer (CGO), or Chief Customer Officer (CCO), aiming to streamline operations and improve efficiency. This session will explore whether current marketing leaders are already fulfilling these broader responsibilities and what this change means for the future of marketing leadership. Additionally, we'll discuss the importance of marketing leaders having a strategic plan to market to internal stakeholders, particularly the CEO and CFO, before focusing on external audiences. Join us to understand how marketing can drive business success in this evolving landscape.
